In regard to the article found on B7 in the March 6th edition: "Beware of rogue elements working in the towing industry." In Saskatchewan, you will find a great group of men and women in the Towing industry; contributing to community events and local charities, employing and supporting local people and business while providing a very necessary service. The negative portrayal of this industry and its' operators is inaccurate and disturbing. The "wreck chasing" that is depicted on a reality TV program from the Eastern province written about in the article, contributes to an adverse perception that towing is some kind of a wild-west, mobster run industry. Many Saskatchewan companies invest regularly in specialized training opportunities for their drivers with the goal of elevating safety and professionalism in our industry. In Saskatchewan, there exists a professional Provincial towing organization. The Roadside Responders Association of Saskatchewan Inc. has had the support of our Provincial Government regarding safety: for example, the slow to 60 campaigns. We were the first Province in Canada to receive authorization to use distinctive lighting while working. Currently, our industry is working to establish a minimum of standard requirement in order to receive a recognizable tow truck plate that will indicate to the motoring public that the truck has met all the requirements to be in the towing business in our Province. Talk to your local garage, body shop, a family member, or friend, for a referral to a quality towing company in your community. Reputable towing companies are accountable and dependable and endeavor to provide excellent service at fair rates.
